DETAILED ACTION

This action is in response to the original filing of June 27, 2007. Claims 2 and 6 have been cancelled. Claims 1, 3-5 and 7 have been amended. Claims 1, 3-5 and 7 are pending and have been considered below.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1, 3-5 and 7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Sezan et al. (US 6,236,395 B1).

Claim 1: Sezan discloses a graphical user interface for a personal video recorder comprising:

- a. Simultaneously presenting on a display, a plurality of different key frames, each key frame associated with a respective different video and representative of a clip within the respectively associated different video, each video separately recorded by a personal video recorder, each video clip and key frame automatically selected by said personal video recorder (column 1, lines 29, column 14, lines 7-40),

- b. Presenting on said display, a plurality of sequential frames of one of said video clips in response to a user selecting a key frame associated with the presented said video clip (column 4, lines 9-15), but does not disclose presenting title information, length information, quality information and source information regarding at least one of the presented said clip and the video associated with the presented said clip. However, Sezan discloses program profiles which define distinctive characteristics of the content of the program, such as actors, stars, rating, director, release date, time stamps, keyword identifications and categories which can be used for filtering in the search for video information. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to add presenting title information, length information, quality information and source information regarding at least one of the presented said clip and the video associated with the presented said clip to Sezan. One could have been motivated to add presenting title information, length information, quality information and source information regarding at least one of the presented said clip and the video associated with the presented said clip to Sezan to facilitate the user in identifying a clip more accurately.

Claim 3: Sezan discloses the interface of claim 1 wherein said plurality of different key frames is presented in a two dimensional array (figures 5 and 9).

Claim 4: Sezan discloses the interface of claim 1 but does not disclose the selection of one of said video clips is based upon, at least in part, the selection of a second video clip. However, Sezan discloses selecting a video based upon a program description wherein the program description scheme identifies the contents of a second video segment (claim 9). Sezan discloses identifying two related video clips associated with the same program description. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to add selection of one of said video clips is based upon, at least in part, the selection of a second video clip to Sezan. One could have been motivated to add selection of one of said video clips is based upon, at least in part, the selection of a second video clip to Sezan because Sezan discloses filtering video content based on user criteria and a user in Sezan may want to quickly scan clips of videos by the clips being played automatically consecutively.

Claim 5: Sezan discloses a graphical user interface for a personal video recorder comprising:

- c. Simultaneously presenting on a display, a plurality of different key frames, each key frame associated with a respective different video and representative of a clip within the respectively associated different video, each video separately recorded by a personal video recorder, each video clip and key frame automatically selected by said personal video recorder (column 1, lines 29, column 14, lines 7-40),

- d. Presenting on said display, a plurality of sequential frames of one of said video clips in response to a user selecting a key frame associated with the presented said video clip (column 4, lines 9-15), but does not disclose the selection of one of said video clips is based upon, at least in part, the selection of a second video clip. However, Sezan discloses selecting a video based upon a program description wherein the program description scheme identifies the contents of a second video segment (claim 9). Sezan discloses identifying two related video clips associated with the same program description. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to add selection of one of said video clips is based upon, at least in part, the selection of a second video clip to Sezan. One could have been motivated to add selection of one of said video clips is based upon, at least in part, the selection of a second video clip to Sezan because Sezan discloses filtering video content based on user criteria and a user in Sezan may want to quickly scan clips of videos by the clips being played automatically consecutively.

Claim 7: Sezan discloses the interface of claim 5 wherein said plurality of different key frames is presented in a two dimensional array (figures 5 and 9).

Conclusion

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments with respect to claim 1, 3-5 and 7 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
